Pastor's Notes

Today, the First Letter to the Corinthians gives us Christianity's most ancient account of Jesus' last supper. Ironically, Paul wrote about Jesus' blessing of bread and wine, not to give his people a liturgical formula or a holy story, but as part of one of the harshest reprimands he ever gave one of his communities.

Paul was more than angry over what he had heard about the Corinthian community. He started his letter by upbraiding them for their rivalries and divisions, then for their silly pride and lack of concern about sexual misconduct in their midst. He decried all sorts of faults, but saved his strongest denunciation for their celebrations of the Eucharist.

Among the Corinthians, the Lord's Supper had become an event where socialites could eat well and flaunt their position while their brothers and sisters in Christ, whose social status didn't measure up, were relegated to the first century's equivalent of the children's table in the kitchen. For that, Paul accuses the haughty of showing contempt for the church of God. He caps it off with the statement, "In giving this instruction, I do not praise the fact that your meetings are doing more harm than good" (1 Corinthians 11:17). He then reminded them of what the Lord's Supper is all about.

We know how Jesus took bread, gave thanks and broke it. Paul reminds us that Jesus identified the bread with his body, his gift of self, and the cup with the new covenant in his own blood. With the bread and the wine, Paul repeats Jesus' phrase in Luke, "Do this in remembrance of me."

By emphasizing "remembrance," Paul called on his peoples' religious imagination and experience. For the Jews of his day, memory had the power to bring the past into the present with such force that people who were born long after an event could truly feel part of it. (Remembering Christ's promises for the future allows the past to influence the present in a similar way.) We might say that among these people religious memory was not an intellectual activity but a power that allowed them to participate in what had formed their people in ages past. Fr Gene

Live the Liturgy—Inspiration for the Week

We all have a tremendous amount of responsibility. Every day presents more challenges and lists of things we need to accomplish. Life, however, is more than just to do lists. Life is more about who we are and how present we are to what is happening around us. Our relationship with God is the same. It is not just about doing the right things or showing up in the right places, even though these are certainly important. What is more important is the quality of our presence in God's presence. How attentive are we to His revelations of presence to us? If life's demands, however noble they be, overly consume us, we will miss being surprised by God's presence: in creation, in sacrament, in our brothers and sisters, and in ourselves. Listen carefully to Martha and Mary's story today.

If you or someone you know is homebound or in the hospital and would like to receive communion, please let your parish office know. Because of privacy laws, we are not allowed to ask facilities if a certain person is there.
